Open Letter to General Services

The Torrance Press carries no particular banners for the Torrance Unified School Board, but in this issue, we submit the General Service Administration is dead wrong.

In the last analysis, education and the availability of proper facilities to educate America's young people weighs more heavily than another industry or another factory grabbing this land for expansion.

The Torrance Press urges the General Service Administration to reconsider its previous ruling.

The Mayor of Torrance, Senators Claire Engel and Thomas H. Kuchel, and Congressman Cecil King have all assured the Torrance School District of their absolute support in this issue.

Tuesday, the General Services Administration, headed by Franklin Floete in Washington, is sending a representative of its San Francisco office to Torrance to double-check this issue.

We invite and urge Mr. GSA Representative to approve a reconsideration. The 26-acre Naval Surplus site should, by every act of long-range planning, be made available to the future school children of Torrance.

Anyone can make a mistake. It takes statesmanship to admit a wrong decision, and steer off onto the right road.

Manpower Mobilization

The California Southland Career Center, a streamlined system to match the requirements of government agencies and employer companies with the available talents of engineers and scientists, will be placed in operation Aug. 23 to 26 at Shrine Exposition Hall, Los Angeles, it was announced by William A. Douglass, president of Careers Inc.

leged activities in restraint of trade violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. The suit charged these companies agreed to allocate business, to adopt uniform base prices, terms and conditions of sale, and to submit to prospective purchasers bids calculated by an agreed-upon formula.

The companies, the suit charged, also retained Fred H. Corray of Urbana, Ill., as a consultant to coordinate their activities.

The defendants pleaded no contest, meaning they did not admit guilt, but pled out, and stood up for punishment.

The government also filed a civil suit at the same time as the criminal indictment issued last July 30. The civil suit has finally been decided, the attorney general's office stated, however, the defendants have offered to enter into a consent decree, without going to trial. They have consented to be enjoined from carrying on further activities.

The federal government has not accepted their consent decree, according to spokesmen in the attorney general's office here.

The state attorney general's office has been examining the effects in California of this alleged conspiracy, affecting the Torrance Unified School district, as other districts.

Should Attorney General Mosk file a suit, the attorney general's office announced individual school boards will be able to sue for their individual amounts. Damages would be trebled, with the school board able to obtain the difference paid and what it would have paid under normal competitive bids.

A similar suit against Wearever Aluminum Co. of New Kensington, Pa., charged with price-fixing of pots, pans, and sundry kitchen equipment sold to schools and institutions, instituted by the State of California, in April 1960 is also pending, the Attorney General's office declared.
